Thank you!

The delicious local foods and memorable agritourism experiences that define Chemung County exist thanks to the cooperation and hard work of our farms, producers, and agriculture-based businesses. When our community comes together to support one another, we preserve not only our local economy, but also the heart and culture that make this region so special.

Every resident plays an important role in helping this local network thrive—whether by visiting a nearby farm, choosing locally grown ingredients, attending community events, or simply sharing these resources with others. Cornell Cooperative Extension of Chemung County works to bring these opportunities together in one place, helping to strengthen connections between residents and local producers. By celebrating and sharing these connections, we can help more people rediscover the joy of supporting local farms and experiencing all that the Chemung community has to offer.
